The two aborts whose sealing move was forced — and the line that avoids them one board, S3 board 10, sealed the same way under none and structured

WHAT HAPPENED

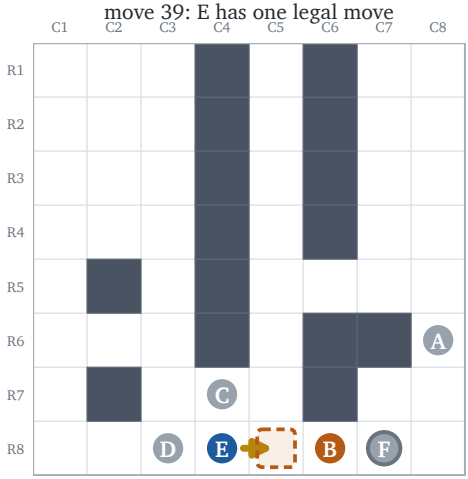
move 38: D plays right

D plays right.

E is now down to one legal move (gold ring).

D left was legal and would enclose nobody.

move 39: E has one legal move



E must move; right is its only legal move.

It is the one cell B had left, R8C5.

B is enclosed. The episode aborts.

WHAT WAS AVAILABLE, under the same rules move 38: D plays left instead

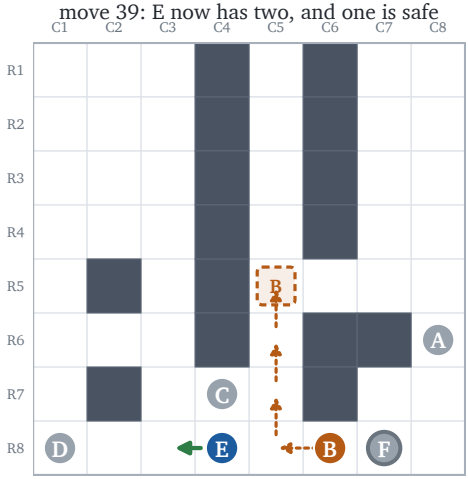
D plays left — equally legal, same ply.

E keeps both exits, so it still has a choice.

Nobody is enclosed.

move 39: E now has two, and one is safe



E plays left. Every player still has a move.

E right would still seal B: this ply matters too.

B keeps R8C5 and its 4-move route home (dotted).

Two ordinary legal moves, one at each ply, and nobody is enclosed — the abort was never the board's doing.
